Where to Apply

Below is a listing of where to submit all (including school projects) applications for stormwater permitting in South Carolina. To most effectively use this list you must know in which county a site is located and if it is located within an incorporated area within that county. If a local government reviews the initial application, then an application for coverage under the NPDES General Permit for Storm Water Discharges from Large and Small Construction Activities (CGP) must be submitted to the Department, along with the $125 NPDES fee, once the local government has completed their review. The Department may select the project for technical review. Also, the Department must review projects located in the eight coastal counties for consistency with the State's Coastal Zone Management Program, and deem them consistent, prior to permit coverage issuance. Coverage under the CGP must be granted by the Department before land-disturbing activities are initiated. Many of the local programs will forward their approval to the Department. Please verify with the reviewing entity that this is the case. In addition, if a site is located across multiple jurisdictions, you must contact each reviewing entity to determine how to proceed with permitting requirements.
